HIGHER TARIFF RATES MAY BE NECESSARY

TO OFFSET DEPRECIATED CURRENCY IN FOREIGN COUNTRIES

While one thousand economists advised President Hoover to veto the Hawley-Smoot tariff bill on the ground that its rates were too high, when that measure was pending a little over two years ago, the President has now instructed the Tariff Commission to make an investigation regarding depreciated currencies in foreign countries to ascertain if present tariff on various commodities should be boosted to still higher levels.

In his letter to Robert L. O'Brien, chairman, directing the Tariff Commission to proceed with investigation with all possible haste, Mr. Hoover made the statement that the money value of our currency has depreciated from 100 to 60 percent since these countries have gone off the gold standard. According to the President this has reduced the standards of living in the foreign countries and has greatly widened the difference in cost of production between the United States and other countries.

According to President Hoover, the chairman of the Tariff Commission was a body of experts collected by the Department of Commerce, who were the President's representatives in the investigation of the effects of the depreciation of the currency on the cost of production in foreign countries.

The Tariff Commission was organized by the President in 1930, and its members were the President's representatives in the investigation of the effects of the depreciation of the currency on the cost of production in foreign countries.

The Fable of a Patient Man

Once Upon a Time there came to a Peaceful Village a Man and he Established Himself a Home there. Now thought he, I will Raise Vegetables for Sustenance whilst I rest from my Labors; Bring up my Progeny; and Grow long Chin Whiskers. So the Man Bought unto himself a House at the Foot of a Hill and Planted there a Garden. When the Garden was Full-grown he Harvested the Produce thereof and Brang it Forth unto his wife. The Surplus of the Produce the wife Garnished with Spices and made palatable with Sugar. Forthwith the Husband was called Canned Goods and Taken to the Cellar. "Yea, I am Favored," the man murmured, "For I can Sit me Back near the Fire-side and enjoy Substance from my own Land all the cold Winter." But lo, a Snow came, then followed a Thaw. The Sewer Pipe in front of his Home was Buried and let the Water into his Larder, Tainting and Spoiling the Canned Goods. The man Comforted himself, "Surely," he thought, "The Town will fix the Pipe and Reimburse me for my Produce." So he took his Complaint to the Town Fathers. They listened to him, and said, "Surely thou hast Suffered thru the Bursting of our Pipe. It shall be Fixed. But your Bill is too large."

The man went from there Back to his Home and labored mightily that his Family might not suffer. Time went on; the Pipe remained Buried; no one came to fix it. Again the man went Forth to the Selectmen. "Our Exchequer is Low," they told him. "But the pipe will be fixed." He waited. Health who went with him and found his cellar damp and of unhealthy.

PATRIOTISM

Following the adoption of the Stars and Stripes as our National Flag there was formulated a code of regulations governing its display. One of these regulations was that the flag should be taken in at sunset. It seems that no-called "patriotic organizations" should be the first to obey the regulations. However, one of these bodies, observing Armistice Day, hung up their flag on Friday morning and not until sometime Saturday was it observed to be still hanging, bedraggled from the precipitation, and taken in.

THE READER COMMENTS

To the Back Page Editor:

Just to amuse you and your astonished readers please say in your next that the so-called legal luminary in your last issue did not dream that he was such a figure and did not intend to speak with authority in regard to town ordinances as laws. He did say that approval of a superior court judge might be necessary. In fact the approval of a superior court judge or the county commissioners is necessary in some cases. In others of course the general law gives town ordinances when passed by a town the effect of laws.

I would like to suggest another topic for your consideration. Town Gossips. Harmless and Otherwise. Among the latter those who circulate untrue, unreasonable, and harmful stories about innocent people that start from low and vicious sources, not to be believed. We find your column very amusing and I am sure some of your contributions have been helpful.
